Fines Are Paid for Waitresses

An unidentified benefactor has paid the Municipal Court fines for two Jamaican Village Inn waitresses who bared their bosoms in an apparent test case of obscenity laws.

But the two women, Yolanda Calzada, 19, and Charlotte French, 25, both of 716 Dauphine, still must face state charges of obscenity. Their bond on the latter charge has been paid by a professional bondsman, it was learned.

They had been fined $50 or 10 days by Municipal Court Judge Joseph R. Bossetta.

Meanwhile in a related matter, Sonny Bennett was incorrectly identified in Saturday's edition of The Times-Picayune as manager of the inn and it was erroneously stated he had been booked with permitting obscenity. Bennett is a prospective purchaser of the establishment and has not been booked.
